Working closely with humanitarian organisations, extensive research and deep expertise in the field of migration make him a passionate researcher of the discipline. Ahmad Wali Ahmad-Yar started working on migration back in 2012 with the UNHCR and ever since, he has worked with several organisations on different aspects of human migration. His PhD at the VUB focuses on theoretical and data gaps in migration research. His research strives to reappraise the assumptions on the quality of data by analysing the gaps and comparing the definitions at different levels such as legislation, data collecting institutes, countries, Europe and at the international scale.