Jolien has been very interested in medicine since childhood. During her studies as a bio-engineer (medical biotechnology) at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, she became passionate about the research. With her doctorate, she makes the link between medicine and scientific research and investigates the relationship between oncolytic viruses (= a type of immunotherapy in the fight against cancer), cell death and the immune system.