As a high school student, I was interested in chemistry, physics and mathematics. I believe studying science changes your view about the universe and natural phenomena. In my higher education career, I thoroughly learnt how chemistry in small scales can affect people's lives. Meanwhile, the study of corrosion opened my eyes to its importance in industry. My current research focusses on improving the understanding of metal corrosion by applying protective coatings.